Water alone will not remove grime from your hands... you need soap, too. It's the same with inward cleaning... it takes more than a mere laxative to remove poisonous matter. That's why ENO'S "Fruit Salt" is so good for you. It helps to make and keep you healthy by thoroughly cleansing the intestinal tract. Take it daily, morning or night. But be sure it's ENO'S.

The Lawns of England

George Arliss, the famous actor whose picture characterization of Darsell is one of the outstanding achievements of the motion picture industry in recent years, in discussing in a magazine article the development of the movies and talkies, says: "It's like the lawns of England. One man with all the good intention in the world cannot produce them; one generation cannot make them; it takes the accumulated care and devotion and growth of centuries to bring them to their velvet beauty."

And if this is true of the justly famed lawns of England, is it not equally true in every walk and achievement of life, even of life itself? The world has progressed upward through the centuries. Man has grown and developed from the cave man era and the aborigine forest dweller to his present degree of intelligence and civilization. It has taken many centuries, thousands of generations, yet man has not yet stopped growing, developing, progressing.

Looking back through the pages of history we can trace the onward march of civilization. It has had its setbacks; at certain periods in the world's history it almost seemed that all the gains of the preceding years and centuries was lost; but the light was never wholly extinguished, and out of these dark ages there came a greater, stronger light.

Man is an ambitious animal. He is also an impatient one, and it is well that he should be so. He is never content with things as they are, but is ever striving for something better. But oftentimes he allows his impatience to get the better of his judgment. Like a child he wants to walk before he has gained the strength to even creep, and the result is a tumble. And if he falls hard enough he learns a lesson he does not easily forget. He profits by it, moves a bit more slowly and warily, and thus makes real and lasting progress.

But just as no child learns through the experiences of another child, so each generation has to make its own mistakes, learn its own lessons, bitter and painful though they may be. But unlike a child, men and women of one generation with their developed intelligence, can and should profit by the mistakes of earlier generations. There is always some justification for a person who makes a mistake once, but there is no excuse for him if he repeats it. And by now man should at least have learned the lesson that there is no short cut to perfection; rather he should be thoroughly convinced of the fact that, "like the Lawns of England," perfection can only be attained through years of intelligent and patient care and devotion of each succeeding generation, and not by one generation impatiently declaring that that has gone before was wrong and proceeding to tear down what has been built up and to replace it with some untried thing of their own devising.

Yet this is one of the greatest dangers that confront mankind throughout the centuries of the past. It has been developed through one great crisis after another. It has been shaped and moulded as the result of many experiments, with the weak and finally discarded, and the strong and the true tested throughout the years retained and developed. Impatient minds, today, and self-seekers who pander to the current feelings of impatience, dissent and insistence upon the application of some immediate and sovereign remedy for all our ills, are either blinded themselves or seek to blind others to the infallible truth that all permanent progress, all lasting reforms, are slow of growth. The mushroom grows to maturity in a night, and passes as quickly, but the oak tree which resists the storms for hundreds of years is slow of growth. But what man of intelligence would exchange an oak for a mushroom?

There was a period in the world's history when all land was owned by the Crown, the government of that day. Private individuals were not allowed to own an acre of it, they were serfs or, at the best, tenants. With the growth of civilization and fuller recognition of the rights of man, the right of ownership of property was extended to all. Yet because many of these individual owners are today in difficulty, the demand has been raised that all land be again nationalized, and all people revert from being land owners in their own right to being tenants of the state. This is the policy of despair; they lack vision and initiative; they confess their inability to correct existing faults by a process of reform and, throwing up their hands, would go back hundreds of years to a system under which man was a chattel rather than a free born citizen.

And what these blind leaders of the blind advocate in regard to land they urge in connection with the whole economic structure of our modern civilization. Instead of looking toward the future, instead of vision, instead of progress and a better state, improving from year to year and from generation to generation, they would sweep away the work and experience of centuries to return to a more primitive state. They have failed to learn the lesson of the "Lawns of England," and because a few weeds or dandelions have grown up in the grass, they would plow up the whole lawn, return to the virgin soil, and begin all over again.

The true course for the world is to eradicate the weeds, but preserve the lawn, either re-seeding the spots requiring such treatment, or converting them into still more beautiful beds of flowers, adding variety and greater beauty to the lawn itself.

In hours of present discouragement and impatience, let us remember the "Lawns of England."

Constable Found Shot

Joseph Loughlin, a member of the police force at Regina, Saskatchewan, who was on leave, was found shot dead at his mother's home at Carrick, Londonderry, Ireland. A double-barrelled shotgun was by his side. Loughlin had been spending his leave in his boyhood home and was to have returned to Canada this week.

Ireland Pays the Price

Loses Biggest Customer Through de Valera's Break With England
France, Holland and Denmark must regard President de Valera as one of their best friends. For years they have looked with longing eyes at the immense British market for agricultural products, but they could sell only what Ireland could not supply and were also faced with a high tariff, which the Free State was not. Now England slaps a 100 per cent. tax on Irish goods, accompanied by a blunt statement from Dominion Secretary J. B. Thomas to the effect that England could not allow a solemn agreement between two members of the British Commonwealth to be treated as a scrap of paper.

De Valera's break with England may have been a fine gesture at the Sassenach, but in making it he lost the customer who took 90 per cent. of what Ireland had to sell. The Guinness breweries at Dublin, famous for their stout, and Henry Ford and Son's tractor plant at Cork, probably continue exporting to England, but this will be due largely because of the individual nature of their merchandise.

The Free State is primarily agricultural, and England is its natural outlet. Ireland, by reason of its geographical location, cannot export as advantageously to any other country. Continental Europe does not urgently require anything Ireland produces that cannot be equally well, and probably more cheaply, supplied by France, Holland and Denmark.

It looks as though de Valera, for all his brave words, may have to do a lot of explaining to his people before the year is out—Detroit Saturday Night.

Horse Recalls Road

After Three Years

Makes All the Old Stops On Long Milk Route

That a horse can remember for more than three years was proven at Kendallville, Indiana, by Fannie, a 22-year-old mare that hauled a milk wagon for Scott Whitford, dairyman, for fifteen years.

In 1929 Whitford finally motorized his business and retired Fannie on a well-earned vacation.

Recently the milk truck was wrecked. In the emergency the old mare and milk wagon were pressed back into service.

At the familiar rattle of milk bottles the mare pranced proudly down the farm lane to the highway and to town, and practically driverless she made all the old stops over the five-hour route without a single mistake.

Teacher Holds Students

Keeping Thirty-Six Until Parents Pay Their Fees

A teacher at a girls' school at Torde, a town in the New Rumanian province of Transylvania, has refused to allow 36 of his pupils to return home until their parents have paid their fees. The girls are the children of officials who for months have not received any pay.

Some of the parents comfort themselves with the reflection that the director will now have to feed their children.

This Wedding Was Different

Attendees For Circus Owner's Daughter Were Four Lions

Two young lions and two lionesses are to act as "best men" and "bridesmaids" at the wedding at Bordeaux, France, of Mile. Rabasson, daughter of a circus proprietor, and M. Franchi, a circus artist. The chief guests will include a bearded woman, the man with a bird's head, two giants, three dwarfs, wrestlers, strong men and women and three men lion-tamers.

The Oil of the People—Many oils have come and gone, but Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil continues to maintain its position and increase its sphere of usefulness each year. Its sterling qualities have brought it to the front and kept it there, and it can truly be called the oil of the people. Thousands have benefited by it and would use no other preparation.

May Alter British Uniform

Slouch hats with wide brims, jackets with leather buttons and big pockets, open-necked shirts and knickerbockers, will probably be the uniform of the British soldier before long. A committee of the war office is now considering the abolition of the present field-service cap, knee-tight khaki jacket and heavy trousers and puttees.

Toothache and neuralgia are instantly relieved with Douglas' Egyptian Liniment. A quick, sure remedy. Also recommended for burns, sprains, sores and inflammation.

Must Remodel Freighters

Opening Of St. Lawrence Waterway Will Call For Different Type Of Lake Vessels

Complete revision in design of Great Lakes freighters will take place upon the completion of the St. Lawrence waterway, shipping experts believe. News that an agreement between Canada and the United States for the waterway has been completed created considerable speculation in shipping circles.

When the waterway is finished, vessels will be able to go from the head of the lakes direct to the Atlantic ocean. At once it will bring the possibility of many changes in lake freighters.

The majority of the lake boats are not equipped for salt water. The long open deck of the lake boats, with its many hatches, are not regarded as practical for ocean use.

However, radical change in design of inland-water boats would be an expensive proposition. Millions of dollars worth of unloading and loading machinery has been installed at the ports, and most of it is peculiarly adapted for the open-deck type of vessel.

Long Standing Asthma. Many have suffered so long from asthma and have tried so many so-called remedies they think that there is no real help for them. They should read the letters received by the manufacturers of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy from hundreds of cases once as desperate as their own. Even in long-ignored cases this famous preparation brings prompt help.

Planning Air Route

Expeditions Pushing Into The North To Locate Bases

Two expeditions are pushing into the north to lay the groundwork for a trans-Atlantic air route to Europe via Canada and the Arctic.

Pan-American Airways disclosed that H. G. Watkins, British explorer, was scheduled to sail from Copenhagen at once to establish two bases in the vicinity of Angmagalik, Greenland.

The Michigan Pan-American Airways Greenland expedition under the direction of R. L. Belknap, of the university of Michigan, also is on the way to a base 100 miles north of Upernivik, and several hundred miles north of the Arctic circle.

Strange Phenomenon Worries Virginia Family

Leaf On Tree In Yard Carries Several Letters

Residents of Clarkburg, Virginia, are startled. An "alphabet" tree has been discovered and the owners are worried about its significance.

When a tree in the yard of Isaac Spoyt blossomed forth it bore initial leaves. Plainly inscribed on one leaf were the letters N-G-E-O-C.

Spoyt and his family are convinced it means something, but just what it might be is the mystery.

Deny Fares Asked For

Phillip Noy, Winnipeg barrister, and Ben Foster, of Canada, deny any fare has been made towards securing a parole for Peter Verigin, Doukhobor leader, sent to jail for 18 months when convicted of perjury. Mr. Noy said an effort has been made to find out the provincial government's attitude towards a parole, but that is all.

Custom Clearing Plant

For Grain Appreciated

Farmers Near Swift Current Praise Facilities Of Federal Station

Farmers in the Swift Current district are highly appreciative of the facilities accorded them in the Federal Experimental Station in the form of a custom clearing plant for seed grain. Last year upwards of 6,500 bushels were cleared at a charge of 5 cents per hundred pounds of uncleaned grain. A great deal of the seed brought in by farmers contained wild oats, French weed and Russian thistle, the latest proving particularly difficult to clean from farm seed.

It was a golden spike, suggesting the vast mineral wealth now open to Canadian enterprise, and the Premier swung his mallet forcefully and true, like the men who built the railway to tap the riches of the north.

Want Canadian Flax

Lines Industry Of Northern Ireland Would Use Canadian Product

The linen industries in northern Ireland would gladly buy Canadian-grown flax if that commodity could be secured and one of his objects in coming to this country is to survey the flax-growing situation in Canada, said Lewis Gray, prominent Belfast industrialist, who attended the Imperial Conference. At present practically all of the flax bought by the Belfast linen trade is grown in Russia.

U. S. Senator Suggests World Conference To Consider War Debts

Washington.—An immediate world conference to consider revision or cancellation of the war debts in connection with the program for settling other post-war problems was proposed in an address here by Senator William Borah of Idaho.

The chairman of the senate foreign relations committee proposed the world conference as a follow-up to which, he said, was more of a "har- the Lausanne reparations agreement, binger of peace and the hope of humanity" than the Versailles peace treaty.

Borah painted the Lausanne agreement as "the most important step taken since the war looking to the restoration of confidence in political and business affairs."

He added that if the policies initiated at Lausanne were carried forward "there will come a time when it will be distinctly to the interest of the people of the United States" to again consider the question of war debts.

Borah proposed that the world conference should have authority to deal with reparations and debts, re-establishment of gold standard, the stabilization of silver in the Orient and possibly other questions.

But he also said the Versailles treaty "must yield to the dictates of conscience and the demands of justice."

Revival Of World Trade

Prince Of Wales Believes Better Times To Come Soon

London, England.—The Prince of Wales said that he believed this year would witness the first move toward the world's return to better times.

Speaking at the West African dinner the Prince said he hoped trade recovery was not far distant and added:

"It is my belief that 1932 will witness the beginning of a return to happier and more prosperous times and a great revival of world trade."

More Money For Egmont

Cowboy Peer Falls Heir To Large Sum Under Will

Calgary, Alberta.—Earl of Egmont, Alberta's cowboy peer, has received £60,000 under the will of Countess of Egmont, who died June 1. The will has been published in England, the bulk of the fortune going to a niece of the countess.

Earl of Egmont, enjoying the outdoors at his ranch near Priddis, Alberta, had no comment to make regarding his good fortune.

Delegates To Conference Welcomed By Canada At Government Dinner

Ottawa, Ont.—While hundreds of candles blinked on bright green tablecloths, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, welcomed once again the delegates to the Imperial Economic Conference. In a setting of rare beauty, nearly 700 distinguished guests from all parts of the British Empire joined in good fellowship. It was the first government dinner, and Canada gave of her best.

The scene was one which impressed itself upon the memory. Green was the prevailing color. Along the side of the great dining room the long head-table, covered with its green damask and ornamented with a lavish display of silver and flowers, focused attention. Off from it ran 11 other shorter tables, each covered with the same green coverings. Around the great room, in the soft light of the hundreds of twinkling candles, flitted scores of white-clad waiters. From the balconies, where an over-flow gathering was seated, music came.

At the tables sat men famous in the history of the British empire. The centre figure at the head table, Prime Minister Bennett, sat under a group of flags—the flags of all the sister nations in the British Commonwealth represented at the conference. Down the long table were the heads of the delegations—Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia. Interspersed with these leaders were their wives,

Sir Henry Thornton Resigns

Retires As President and Chairman Of Canadian National

Ottawa, Ont.—Resignation of Sir Henry Thornton as president and chairman of the Canadian National Railways has been accepted by the board of directors and the Dominion Government. His resignation is effective August 1.

Coincident with this announcement came a statement that S. J. Hungerford would be acting president of the system in charge of operation and construction.

Future plans of Sir Henry have not been disclosed. He issued a statement in Montreal, but gave no intimation of his future plans.

Simultaneous with announcement of Sir Henry's intention to sever his connection with the C.N.R., after a few months less than 10 years service, rumors circulated that United States' roads were seeking his services. One report was that a railway of the western states had made Sir Henry an offer, but it was officially said at Montreal that no such offer had been accepted.

Canadian Offered Post

Victoria Man Likely Trainer For Olympic Cycling Squad

Vancouver, B.C.—William "Torchy" Peden, of Victoria, B.C., recognized as the world's premier six-day bicycle racer, has been offered the post of trainer to the Canadian Olympic cycling squad which will show in Los Angeles next month.

A. Y. Douglas, chairman of the British Columbia Wheelmen's Association, stated recently that as soon as the Victoria cycling star consents he will travel south to take up his duties with the Dominion's cycling boys.

Irish Issue Shelved

Ottawa, Ont.—The differences between Great Britain and the Irish Free State will not be projected into the deliberations of the Imperial Conference. This was made clear by Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Dominions' secretary in the British government, and also by Sean T. O'Kelly, vice-president of the Free State executive council.

Party Reported Safe

Vancouver, B.C.—Missing since they left Newcastle Island in a 35-foot launch on a return trip to Vancouver, 14 persons are now reported safe. They were sought in the Gulf of Georgia by planes, launches and other craft.

and also members of the Dominions government.

Beautiful dresses shimmering forth all the colors of the rainbow, shone out against the background of conventional black and white worn by the men. No uniforms were worn, but many of the distinguished guests wore their orders and decorations. Speeches, which did not start until after 10 o'clock, were brief.

As Prime Minister Bennett rose, the gathering arose with him. Cheer after cheer greeted him, and green napkins waved like leaves around the room.

"This is a family gathering," said Mr. Bennett in happy mood. He referred to the fact that "men of great distinction in their own countries" were there. Canada numbered among her guests three former prime ministers, a former lord chancellor of Great Britain and a present chancellor of the exchequer. The premier of Southern Rhodesia, H. W. Moffat, was a nephew of "the great missionary, Livingstone." Newfoundland, which had succeeded in convincing eminent judges "that a part of Canada belonged to her," had sent her minister of justice. It was a matter of pride to Canada to have these and the other eminent delegates present.

The prime minister gave the toast to "Our Guests." It was honored standing.

Then Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, head of the British delegation arose. Again applause sounded.

Dictatorship For Prussia

Martial Law Has Been Declared In Berlin

Berlin, Germany.—The federal government set up a dictatorship over the entire state of Prussia, declaring martial law in Berlin and the province of Brandenburg and sweeping out of office every member of the Prussian state cabinet.

This drastic action precipitated the worst constitutional conflict since the founding of the Reich in 1871.

The Prussian authorities, declaring the dictatorship to be contrary to law, refused to yield to the demands of the federal government except by force. In many cases force was used.

Berlin was under heavy guard tonight, and machine guns were mounted in the court in front of the federal chancellery. Every precaution was being taken to prevent disorders.

Under an emergency decree issued by President Paul von Hindenburg, Chancellor Franz von Papen became federal commissioner administering the state of Prussia. He named Lord Mayor Franz Bracht of Essen deputy commissioner. One of the state's first acts was to attempt to take over the state ministry of interior, and he encountered plenty of trouble.

That ministry has for years been under Dr. Karl Severing, sworn foe of the present federal regime and of its move to sweep away the state government. When Severing refused to hand over the ministry a police captain threatened to drag Dr. Severing out. So Dr. Severing yielded his post. He was not arrested.

Protecting Grain Ships

Radio Ensures Safety For Vessels Out Of Churchill

Churchill, Man.—When the first Atlantic ships head into Hudson Straits on their way to Churchill to load grain next month, they will be constantly protected by a series of radio stations located at strategic points throughout the Far North.

The ships will first come in contact with the radio station at Resolution Island, near the eastern entrance of the straits. Then there is Cape Hope Advance, about midway through the straits. Farther on is Nottingham Island base, at the west entrance to the channel.

These three stations, plus a fourth at Churchill, are known as direction finding stations. This means that the captains of vessels can communicate with the several stations, during fog, for instance, and his position may be plotted on charts.

Opium Seizure

Drug Found Concealed In Galley On Board Liner

Vancouver, B.C.—Customs officers have seized $7,000 worth of opium found concealed in a galley on board the liner "Empress of Japan."

The officers obtained additional scattered contraband valued at $500. Members of the crew reported that some deliveries of narcotics were made off Honolulu; the stuff being tossed overboard to be picked up by fishing boats.

Holland Needs Canadian Wheat

Montreal, Que.—Holland needs Canadian wheat for its quality, which other countries cannot match, declared I. Van Denbergh, grain merchant of The Hague, in an interview here. The Dutch wheat crop this year is estimated at 300,000 tons, he said. The country's consumption is double this figure. Some of this balance will come from Canada, he said.

RAMSAY MACDONALD'S CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT

To bring about a successful conclusion to the Lausanne Reparations Conference when all hope of a satisfactory settlement was lost is the great achievement of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain. Ramsay MacDonald is shown standing between Herr von Papen, German Chancellor (left), and M. E. Herriot of France (right), whom he brought together and persuaded to settle their differences. His Majesty the King sent the British Premier a telegram of congratulations following the signing of the accord.

Dakota Farmers Hope For Dollar Wheat

Plan To Hold Grains Until Level Is Reached

Tolna, N.D.—Across the prairies of North Dakota, expected to produce one-sixth of the United States' wheat output this year, is heard a chorus: "Hold the grain for $1 a bushel."

If sponsors are successful, the cry will be taken up throughout the United States.

Dell Willis, Tolna farmer, is chairman of the organization which has stirred the farmers in more than 400 North Dakota townships to pledge holding their wheat, effective August 1, unless and until the dollar level is reached.

"This period of low prices finally has brought us to a position where it is either sink or swim," Willis said.

"We will hold our wheat until there is a demand for it at the price of one dollar per bushel, and then we will sell only 10 per cent. of it one month," Willis continued. "This will make an orderly marketing system."

He said the plan, launched here less than a week ago, has been enthusiastically received.

The agreed price will be based on Winnipeg quotations. The dollar will be for the best wheat, with discount for lower grades.

May Last Five Weeks

Cautious Estimate Made For Deliberations Of Imperial Parley

Ottawa, Ont.—Malcolm MacDonald, M.P., son of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, thinks the deliberations of Imperial conference delegates might last "five weeks," which is the cautious estimate of everybody. What emerges from the five weeks remains to be seen; but if the impressiveness of personal meetings anything, the results should be thoroughly comprehensive.

With the exception of Newfoundland's Prime Minister, the personnel of the conference is complete. Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, heads a British delegation in which no fewer than 78 persons were included. Less imposing are the other national groups.

Undergoes Operation

London, Eng.—Princess Beatrice, aunt of the king and mother of former Queen Victoria of Spain, underwent an operation for removal of a cataract from her right eye. Her condition was reported satisfactory.

Australia To Enlarge Margin Of Preference In Favor Of Britain

Sends Largest Group

United Kingdom Has Greatest Representation At Conference

Ottawa, Ont.—Delegates, official and technical advisers, personal staff secretaries and unofficial counsellors to the Imperial Conference number 122. Of that number the United Kingdom has the largest proportion, with 78, which is one more than Canada itself.

Great Britain has sent seven delegates, 35 advisers, members of personal staff, business consultants, unofficial counsellors and secretariat. Canada's delegation totals 13, with 50 advisers and a secretariat of 14.

The smallest group is from Southern Rhodesia, whose premier, Hon. H. W. Moffat, heads a party of eight.

The other empire nations distribute their representation as follows:

Australia, two delegates and 20 others; New Zealand, two delegates and 14 others; South Africa, three delegates and 22 others; the Irish Free State, three delegates and 17 others; Newfoundland, two delegates and seven others; India, eight delegates and nine others.

Accommodation for this large number has been found in the House of Commons Building, while a special directory of information has been issued regarding them.

Triumph For League

Four Powers Agree In Principle To Limit Armaments

Geneva, Switzerland.—A resolution ending the first phase of the world arms conference was drawn up by the general commission of the conference. Edouard Herriot, French Premier, announced the four powers—Britain, United States and Italy—had usually in principle that land armaments should be limited. Herriot welcomed the text as "a triumph for the League."

Reception Was Perfect

London, England.—Listeners in Great Britain were delighted by perfect reception of the wireless broadcast of the opening of the Imperial Conference at Ottawa.

Premier Bennett Offers Wider Preferences Within The Empire

Ottawa, Ont.—The Imperial Economic Conference passed swiftly from opening declarations of policy to the less impressive consideration of methods of work. Heads of delegations met and decided to appoint five committees:

- (1) Promotion of trade within the commonwealth.
- (2) Customs administration.
- (3) Commercial relations with foreign countries.
- (4) Monetary and financial questions.
- (5) Methods of economic co-operation.

No appointments to the committees were made. Each delegation is to meet separately, decide on its nominees, then formal appointments will be made.

Meanwhile all delegates are keenly discussing the offer of wider preference with which Premier Bennett opened the conference. The seven ministers of the British delegation are to hold a series of "cabinets" to examine the Bennett proposal in all its implications.

Under the present British tariff system, wheat and meat are on the free list. Imports of wheat and meat from the dominions therefore are not tariff preferences in the British market.

Mr. Bennett proposes the United Kingdom "shall extend the principle of her tariff preferences to natural products." Wheat and meat are not specifically mentioned but they obviously come within the scope of the Bennett scheme. There possibly will be the chief problem of the British delegation in determination of its attitude. For the moment, however, the British content themselves with reticence of Mr. Baldwin's words at the opening session—that the British delegation will study the proposal sympathetically on the lines laid down

Ottawa, Ont.—Australia has now tabled her cards. She offers wider preferences to Great Britain. She asks wider preferences in return.

Rt. Hon. Stanley Bruce, head of the Australian delegation, outlines the scheme in a statement submitted to the Imperial Economic Conference. By further reclassification of her tariff, Australia will make available in a preferential way to Great Britain, protected areas in Australian industry which are not being exploited by Australian manufacturers.

She will widen the margin of preference in Britain's favor with respect to admission of essential goods not produced in the commonwealth. Possibly with very slight exceptions, she will undertake to remove remaining prohibitions and surcharges imposed for financial reasons two years ago. She will adhere to all preferences now obtaining. She will give "earnest consideration" to any British requests for additional concessions which are in the power of Australia to make.

Mr. Bruce is emphatic that all these proposals are conditional on reasonable reciprocity. He mentions meats, dairy products, fruit, wheat, wool, but it is on meats particularly that Mr. Bruce presses the point. "On meat, and here I am including pig products," Mr. Bruce says, "Australia requests, and indeed must firmly press for effective assistance from Great Britain." He declares Australia has heard with "much astonishment" the suggestion the British preferential concessions are conditional on new or increased preferences being granted by the dominions. "I may add," Mr. Bruce further observes, "that the unanimous view of the Australian people is that, while for a quarter of a century they have given preferences to Great Britain freely and unconditionally, they regard the British preferences granted under the Import Duties Act as a somewhat tardy response for the benefits from Australia, long enjoyed by British industry."

Princess George Promoted

London, England.—Princess George, youngest son of the king, has advanced another step in his naval career with appointment as personal naval aide-de-camp to his majesty.

On the assumption effective operation of the agreement would not be impaired by unfair competition, Mr. Bennett, on behalf of Canada, proposed to grant to the United Kingdom:

- (1) Extension of the free list;
- (2) Retention of the existing preferences in favor of Great Britain;
- (3) Increased preferences in respect of a selected list of articles in which Great Britain is especially equipped to supply the Canadian market without incurring efficient Canadian enterprise.

In exchange, Canada asked:

- (1) The retention of existing preferences;
- (2) Their effective extension to those other natural and processed products of which the United Kingdom is an importer.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Premier Bennett is a good showman. To give Canadians, and people of other countries the opportunity of at least hearing the delegates to the Imperial Economic Conference, the government staged an elaborate banquet at the Chateau Laurier. The radio broadcast enabled people to hear what was said. From the Dominions of the Empire, and from Great Britain, the delegates brought messages of greeting and goodwill. "Little more than a quarter of a century ago," stated the Union of South Africa delegate, "the English were chasing the Boers over the dusty plains." "Jimmy" Thomas, the engine-cleaner who rose to cabinet position, regretted he was only allowed four minutes, and that his whiskey glass was running dry. Sean O'Kelley, the Irish Free State delegate, gave the audience an ear-full in Gaelic, which probably none present understood. "Jimmy" openly expressed the opinion he would have done better had he stuck to his mother tongue.

Mr. Chatterjee, the delegate from India, was charmed with the climate, but would not take chances on remaining for the winter. The gentleman from Rhodesia was a quiet man, and did not indulge in any wit as did the other delegates. Possibly he did not have the same brand to drink. Mrs. Baldwin, wife of the ex-premier, made a gracious reply to the toast of "The Ladies," and caused a thrill of pride in stating how impressed she was the first time she heard "O Canada" sung. The listener-in, hearing the sounds of revelry and the witty sallies (we don't mean the ladies) realized that after all these distinguished representatives of the British dominions enjoy their fun just as heartily as the rest of us. The deeper significance is realized that out of good-will arises co-operation in all lines of effort, among nations as among individuals.

Boy Scout interest increases in the Crows Nest Pass. The second annual camp provided nearly a hundred boys with ten days camping enjoyment at small cost. It is to be hoped that as in their young days they received help to establish summer camps, as they grow older they will extend the helping hand to other Boy Scouts. The true Scout will always try and help others as well as himself, and be prepared to do a good turn every day. Parents appreciate the good influence of the camp commandant and Scoutmasters.

Lies and abuse are the refuge of those who cannot reason. The less brainy type resort to bullying to overcome opponents. Such types inevitably meet their Waterloo. The poor misguided strikers who follow "Red" leadership will eventually discover they have been following false prophets and blind trails.

A gross misrepresentation is that of stating that government subsidies for Alberta coal mean profits for mine operators. The freight subvention is of help to the Canadian coal industry, miners, railways, operators and all who receive benefit from the industry. It was granted in order to give more work to Canadian mines, to offset immense importations from the United States. But lying leaders will use the subvention, a genuine aid to Canadian miners, as a means to bolster their falsehoods. Unfortunately their dupes have not the intelligence to perceive the truth. There is a class that rather enjoy being fed on lies. Barnum was absolutely right.

In face of the campaign of lies still carried on it behooves all Citizens who support the constitution to be ever on their guard against those lying revolutionary influences which are trying to wreck this country. The type posing as leaders disgust thinking people. The Journal throughout has maintained it is useless to attempt to reason with those who are responsible for continuing the strike. With the present leaders in charge, their object is better served by keeping foolish followers on strike. The last thing they want is a settlement. The hangers-on and so-called "executive" would be minus their jobs immediately the strikers return to work.

Gophers and grasshoppers, drought and dust-storms are enemies the farmers of south central Saskatchewan have gallantly fought for four years. You have to travel through those arid districts to fully realize the unbeatable spirit of the farmers in fighting a battle which taxes their mental and physical resources to as great an extent as an army in the field contending against overwhelming odds.

The most industrious and efficient farmer cannot win against such odds. Like the English at Waterloo, he requires assistance to enable him to win, for the farming industry means everything to this great western country which has a quarter of a century record of progressive development unsurpassed in any country.

The great majority of farmers are not seeking paternalism or charity—they are asking for assistance which will enable them to stage a come-back when Nature again favors these great plains of the south with long delayed moisture. They are just as concerned over mounting debts and interest charges as are the bankers and business men of the cities, and would welcome measures which would relieve them of severe mental strain which is a handicap to constructive enterprise.

The farmer does not wish to repudiate his debts; he is not turning "Bolshevik" to get from under; but he does make it known that he cannot pay his debts under such conditions as have existed for four years. The best business brains of the country could not do any better.

"Is the farmer downhearted?" you well might ask. It may be difficult for him to smile under such a trial. He may scan the horizon

Cut Cropping Costs with THE NEW IMPERIAL TRACTOR DISTILLATE

As soon as distribution can be made from its three Western refineries Imperial Oil Limited will market a new product for tractors to be known as Imperial Tractor Distillate. It will sell at a new low price.

The new Imperial Tractor Distillate is an Imperial Oil achievement in securing high quality at a low price. It is a superior fuel for tractor use specially made to give more power and greater economy. Because of its low price and efficiency it will mean a decided reduction in the farmer's power bill. Every effort will be made to ensure an early and continuous supply at all Imperial bulk distributing points in the Western provinces.

A heavy demand is certain, so see your nearest Imperial Oil agent and arrange now for your supply of Imperial Tractor Distillate.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS OF PROGRESS

A forgotten artist, too modest to sign his name, and a second-hand dealer form the strange combination that brought to light one of the best examples of the growth of Canada's trade with the Orient. Forty-five years ago the first ship ever to fly the house-flag of the Canadian Pacific, a flag that has since found its way into practically every port in the world, set out from Port Moody, B.C. She was the barque-rigged steamer "Abyssinia" and, such a marvel was she that the modest artist referred to transferred her graceful shape to canvas with painstaking detail.

Another artist, chancing upon the picture, imposed it upon a photograph of the latest Canadian Pacific ship in the Orient trade, the magnificent Empress of Japan. They are shown above in exact proportion as they would have appeared passing each other on the broad wastes of the Pacific.

Some idea of the development of shipping in the 45 years may be gained by a comparison. The "Abyssinia" was 388 feet six inches long, 42 1/2 feet wide, had a tonnage of 3,378 and a speed of 18 knots. The "Empress of Japan" is 670 feet long, 87 1/2 feet wide, has a tonnage of 26,000 and, during her record-breaking passages between Vancouver, Victoria, Yokohama, Shanghai, Hong Kong and Manila has developed as high as 23 knots—more than half as fast again.

A strange coincidence is that the "Abyssinia" was chartered from W. G. Pearce, who later became the Fairfield Shipbuilding Company which famous Clydeside shipyard built the Empress of Japan two years ago.

Death of Joseph Fox Bell

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. J. F. Bell in the death of her husband, Joseph Fox Bell, who died on Tuesday, July 19. He was 46 years of age and had resided in Coleman for about six years, coming from Vigton, Cumb., England.

The surviving members of the family are his wife, and two daughters, Mrs. Hirst, Coleman, and Mrs. Asbridge, Mercoval.

The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon, July 21, service being at the United church, Rev. A. E. Larke officiating, burial taking place at the Union cemetery.

The pallbearers were Fred Fisher, Gus James, Tom Morley, Alf. Phillips, Fred Cox and Dave Bowen.

Those sending wreaths and flowers were: Wife and Family, Mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. James, Irene and Johnnie, Mr. and Mrs. Rush ton, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Derbyshire, Workmates of the Machine Shop, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. T. Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. E. Ash, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Steven Milley, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Devine, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Short, Mr. and Mrs. J. Burns, Claresholm; Mr. and Mrs. T. Burns, Vancouver, and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Shaw, Corbin.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. J. F. Bell and family desire to express their heartfelt thanks for the many kindnesses and expressions of sympathy extended to them during their recent bereavement, to those who loaned cars and for all wreaths and floral tributes, to Dr. Dimock, Dr. McLean, and nursing staff of the hospital, also the ladies who so kindly helped.

Here and There

The Nova Scotia Dairyman's Association will hold their next annual convention in 1933, at the Cornwalls Inn, Kentville, N.S.

Shipments of celery to Canada this year from Bermuda totalled 25,000 crates in contrast to last year when the shipments were virtually negligible.

Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., had heavy traffic on an excursion from New York to Nova Scotia on the occasion of the first trip in June of the S.S. Acadia from New York to Yarmouth, N.S.

Railroad transportation is an essential economic function on this continent and given reasonably free rein should speedily show good recovery using it to increase buying of materials and employment of labor, says the Greenville (S.C.) News editorial.

Total production of honey in Canada in 1931 amounted to 27,867,387 lbs. valued at $2,064,094. Ontario led the Dominion with a production of 12,000,000 lbs. with Manitoba second with 7,547,176 lbs., and Quebec third with 6,628,400 lbs.

Ten thousand rainbow trout fingerlings have been deposited in the French River in June, following 7,500 fingerlings deposited last year. The previous experiment was so satisfactory that the present action has been taken and it is expected that these efforts, the French River Bungalow Camp will have added rainbow trout to its already well diversified angling attractions.

Bob Davis, globe-trotting New York Sun columnist, is back in his beloved British Columbia, having recently arrived from Honolulu aboard the Empress of Canada, of the Canadian Pacific fleet. He proposes to spend some time in fishing expeditions both in the province and also in the Rockies where he will meet Irvin S. Cobb and Courtney Riley Cooper, also famous American publicists.

Tourists spent almost one million dollars for every working day in Canada last year, a sum virtually equal to $380,000,000, the Cannington, Ontario, Gleason, points out and claims that this puts it into the class of big business which should be carefully fostered. Commenting on the same subject, the Nelson, B.C. News states that there are numbers of small towns throughout Canada which have not yet realized what the tourist business could do for them.

Evidence of the growing popularity of the Canadian Pacific Railway low rate bargain return trips, inaugurated this year, was again furnished by the success of the Quebec Province and Montreal excursion to Toronto and Niagara Falls, June 17, when no fewer than 3,500 Quebecers took the trip in four specials on the Friday, returning the following Sunday night. His Honor the Mayor of Toronto issued a hearty welcome to those making the trip.

List of Flowers

Below is a list of those sending wreaths and flowers at the funeral of Mr. James Muir, Wed. July 20. Mr. and Mrs. Archie Beveridge and Betty, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Milley and Billy, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Muir, Alex; Mr. D. Davidson and family, Alex; Mrs. C. W. Trenn, Calgary; Mrs. D. Murphy, Regina; Mr. and Mrs. J. Kinnear, Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Fyfe, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. ## Repairs Would Cost Plenty

Sunday Visitor To Farm Had Car Badly Mussed Up

A resident of Moncton, Ontario, who is noted for the spotless and shiny way in which he always keeps his car, went on a visit one Sunday to a friend living at some distance. The car was parked out in the open yard. The bull, seeing this strange object in the yard, had his curiosity aroused and came up to inspect it. Seeing his image reflected in the side of the well groomed car, he presumed he saw a rival. He threw up the turf with his hoof and advanced to the conflict. He charged again and again until the rival was no longer visible and the side of the car presented a mass of ruts and dents. Walking around the car, he perceived another rival on the other side and treated him similarly. No doubt, the bull had his satisfaction, but the owner is now premeditating the payment of a bill for having his car re-shaped and re-lacquered, and believes that the stall is the place for bulls.

Was Incurable Too

Visitor To Prison Showed That In Meeting Prisoner

A neat rebuff to tactlessness was that administered the other day by Adolph Lewisohn, who at eighty-three is interested in prison reform and likes to be shown through prisons. Visiting a celebrated bastille we hear, he stopped to chat and shake hands with the prisoners. The warden, who was along, didn't like this very much, but said nothing until Mr. Lewisohn extended his hand to one peculiarly low-browed inmate. The warden couldn't bear it any longer. "Don't shake hands with him. He's incurable!" he warned. "I am incurable too," said Mr. Lewisohn, and shook hands cordially.

Interesting Facts About

St. Lawrence Waterway

Completion of Entire Project Will Take Seven Years

Salient facts of the projected St. Lawrence development include:

Cost—Between $750,000,000 and $800,000,000.

Division—Equal apportionment, with Canada being credited with $210,000,000 of existing deep canals and other navigational works.

Hydro-Power—Five million h.p. will eventually be made available. In the international section, 2,200,000; and in the Quebec section, 3,000,000. (The latter includes the Beaudouin development).

Power Distribution—The international section development of 2,200,000 h.p. will be divided equally between Canada and the United States, Ontario will take all of Canada's share.

Navigation—The channel will be 27 feet deep.

Time—From the beginning of operations until the first power is delivered—three years.

For completion of the entire deep waterway—seven years.

Defensive Tactics In Contract

Defensive procedure in Contract is that part of the game which requires more experience, knowledge and practice than any other particular department. And this knowledge and experience is entirely apart from that needed in the actual defensive play of the cards.

The defensive bidder is in the position of a general in a battle in which the forces are not evenly matched and the bidder knows this fact and knows that his forces are inferior to the forces of the adversaries. And it therefore becomes necessary for the defensive bidder to make use of camouflage, subterfuge, and any other stratagems which come to hand. And this must be done with the two objectives of deceiving and intimidating the opposition, and at the same time, not deceiving the partner.

In all the systems of contract so far discussed the principles behind good defensive tactics have only been touched upon. And the reason for this is, that, generally as far as defense goes, each particular deal is an original problem in itself. It then follows that any rules or principles laid down for defense must, for these reasons, be subject to much greater variation, than the principles of offensive bidding.

It may be said, after a partnership has opened the bidding, that the majority of the time, the adversaries of the opening bidder are immediately on the defensive. It has been shown that as a rule, the opening bid is made on defensive strength, and therefore immediately the opening bid is made, it becomes known to the adversaries that the opening bidder has more than his share of high cards of the deal. And that therefore, if the partner of the opening bidder has an average high card hand, the balance of strength is in the hands of opening bidder and his partner. It follows, then, that, after the opening bid, the first adversary, unless holding a strong high card hand, knows that any bid he makes is made with only a slight chance that he will be allowed to play the hand. What, then, is the object of the overall of an opening bid, when the overcaller is weak in high card strength? Primarily there are three objects:—1st. To give what information he can regarding his hand to his partner, while the bidding is at low contracts. 2nd. Any bid made immediately after the opening bid tends to disturb the smooth working of the usual response system between the opening bidder and his partner. To use a colloquialism, it immediately overalls throws a "monkey wrench" into the machinery of the partnership language of the adversaries. 3rd. To suggest to the opening bidder and his partner that the hand of the overcaller is strong under the hope that this thought will so intimidate them that they stop the contracting short of game. These then, are three principal reasons for the defensive overall.

The danger of the weak overcall lies in the fact that the partner of the overcaller may be trickless, and the defensive bidder finds himself in the position of having to take a substantial penalty. In other words, the weak overcall is gambling and therefore the gambler he takes must be safeguarded by sufficient high cards, so that even if the overcaller's partner has a "bad" hand, the resulting penalty will not be too large.

The overcaller must always know whether he is vulnerable or not. If vulnerable the overall must not be made unless the hand of the overcaller has between four and five taking tricks in the bid made. When not vulnerable the overcalling hand may be bid a trick or two weaker.

What then are the requirements for an overall? The writer has laid down the following specifications for his own game and has found by experience, that the factor of safety in these specifications is great enough so that no serious penalty is incurred except very occasionally.

1st. When not vulnerable to overall with a bid of one. Any five card biddable suit with 1½ honor tricks or any four card biddable suit and about two honor tricks. When vulnerable a biddable five card suit with 1½ honor tricks or a four card biddable suit with two honor tricks.

2nd. To overall with a bid of two. When not vulnerable a good five card trump suit (four tricks) and at least 1½ honor tricks. When vulnerable a strong five card trump suit or longer (at least four trump tricks) and at least two honor tricks.

It must always be remembered that many hands are so distributionally strong that they may be used to overall even when the hand contains no honor tricks. With this type of hand however, the writer believes that the overall should not be made immediately, but should be delayed until the second round of bidding. Then when it is bid, the first pass has shown to the partner that the hand does lack honor tricks. And in case of high bidding by the adversaries the danger of a premature double by the partner of the overcaller is averted.

THE GIVING OF THE MANNA

Golden Text: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights."—James 1:17.

Lesson: Exodus 16:1-36. Devotional Reading: John 6:32-40.

Explanations and Comments

Comments, verses 1-3.—On the fifteenth day of the second month after leaving Egypt, the caravan reached the wilderness of Sin, between Elim and Sinai. Here occurred the "murmurings" against Moses. Fortunate it was for him that he did not know in advance how many and how varied would be the complaints and rebellions of his people, nor how long he would have to endure them. "Would that we had died by the hand of Jehovah in the land of Egypt," they cried, "when we sat by the flesh-pots, where we did eat bread to the full." "By the hand of Jehovah" is a reference to the last plague inflicted upon the Egyptians. They "ate bread to the full" in Egypt, "for it was the habit of the Egyptians to feed well those employed in forced labor, just as slave owners commonly do their slaves."—Rawlinson.

"They remembered the flesh-pots of Egypt, but not their afflictions, the taskmaster's lash and other cruel oppressions. Human nature is ever the same. The spectacles of diverse content magnify past blessings and present miseries alike."

They even accused Moses of having brought them forth into the wilderness to kill them all with hunger. How like their journeyings such complaints have been severely punished, for after so many years' experience of God's providence, something better was expected of them. Now food is promised them, "bread from heaven."

"The supply of manna has been variously explained; but though natural phenomena may indicate the direction in which aid was vouchsafed, they are inadequate, in their ordinary exhibition, to account for the whole facts recorded. One theory, which has been favored by many, is that manna was simply the sugary exudation from the twigs of the tamarisk tree, which from the earliest years has been called 'man' or 'mann' by the Arabs. It is used by them as a relish, and is not abundant. Another idea has been advanced—that of its having been derived from the manna rains known in various countries. There is an edible lichen which sometimes falls in showers several inches deep, the wind having blown it from the spots where it grew, and carried it onwards."—Cunningham Geikie.

Recipes For This Week

(By Betty Barclay)

CHOCOLATE DROP COOKIES

2 cups special cake flour, sifted.
½ teaspoon soda.
Dash of salt.
¾ cup butter or other shortening.
1 cup sifted brown sugar.
1 egg, well beaten.
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted.
¾ cup milk.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
¾ cup walnut meats, broken.

Sift flour once, measure, add soda and salt, and sift again. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add chocolate and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla and nuts. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 7 minutes. Makes 50 cookies.

CALIFORNIA POINSETTIA SALAD

(Serves 6)
3 oranges.
6 blueberries cream cheese.
2 red pimientos.

Peel oranges and separate into segments. Make cheese into 6 balls, and sprinkle with paprika. Cut pimientos into long, narrow strips. Place a cheese ball in center of each salad plate and arrange orange segments radiating out from it like the petals of a flower. Place strips of pimiento between orange segments. Pour French Dressing over all.

Some Helpful Hints

It is convenient to remember that milk removes ink stains, cigarette ash removes rings left by a wet glass on furniture, ammonia will clean diamonds; and tooth paste takes the black coating away from silver jewelry.

New Finger-Print Method

Reproduction Is Now Feasible Without Aid Of Photography

A revolutionary method of reproducing finger-prints direct, without the aid of photography, has just been made public by Dr. Leung, assistant director of the technical laboratories of the Lyons (France) police department.

The new procedure eliminates, the photographer, says Count A. N. Mirzaof, writing in Everyday Science and Mechanics (New York):

"Finger-printing procedure, at present, is a complicated affair. The method generally uses paper, covered with a specially prepared gelatin solution, and carefully placed over the finger or hand-prints left by the criminal.

"A photograph of this is then made by the department's photographer and, after careful development, turned over to the expert for study and research.

"The invention of Dr. Leung completely revolutionizes this work. His method is more rapid and obtains a more perfect print than any other in use.

"Dr. Leung claims that much of the fine detail in the finger-print is lost by the old method because—first, the print is transferred to paper; then the paper with the print is photographed; then a photograph is made from the negative. In every operation some detail is lost. With his procedure, no detail whatsoever is lost; it is all there.

"His invention consists of a mixture which has a base of collodion, amylacetate, acetone, and ether.

"This solution is kept in a bottle, and is always ready for use; it is applied in this fashion:

"The detective begins by first dusting the object on which finger-prints are found, with 'animal black.' Over this is then poured some of the mixture which, in a few seconds, forms a thin film, transparent as glass.

"This film can be lifted very easily off the object on which it is deposited; and on it is found the reproduction of the finger-print, with every detail faithfully recorded.

"There is no necessity, then, for making photographs, since the film can be carried about like a piece of paper. The traces of the finger-prints can be studied from both sides of the film because of its transparent qualities.

"Leung's system is to be adopted by every police department in France.

"It is economical; it is accurate and dependable. A bottle replaces three photographers."

Study Polar Phenomena

Twenty-Six Countries To Form Chain Around the Arctic Circle

Seven men from the Canadian meteorological service will co-operate with 26 other countries in forming a chain around the Arctic circle to study polar phenomena during the second international polar year programme, beginning August 1.

J. E. Lilly is already at Resolution Island in Hudson Strait, and R. C. Jackson and C. Kinnear have left for Fort McMurtry, Alta. They will be stationed however at Coppermine.

The second Canadian party, led by F. T. Davies, of McGill University, Montreal, includes B. W. Currie, of the University of Saskatchewan, S. McVeigh of Queen's University and John Rae, cook-observer. They will be stationed for at least 14 months at Port Churchill.

The British expedition, destined for Port Rae, on Great Slave Lake, was reported to be on its way.

Was First U.S. Woman Senator

Dr. Martha Hughes Cannon, 75, physician and first woman state senator in the United States, died recently at Los Angeles. She was elected to the Utah Legislature in 1896 and served two terms, sponsoring laws pertaining to public health and the welfare of women and children.

Dairen, Japan, has a jam of export products awaiting shipment.

"Right. That's all fixed, then."
"Quite. Mind you also fix a fine day —or night, rather! Goodbye."

A muffled farewell came back
along the wire, and then Jean, replacing the receiver of his clip, ran off to appraise Lady Anne of the arrangements made.

"Lady Anne looked up from some

CHAPTER XXVI.
Moonlight On the Moor

The moorland, warm with its subtle fragrance of gorse—like the scent of peaches when the sun is shining on them—tonic with the faint tang of salt borne by clean winds that sweep
across the Atlantic, came to Jean's nostrils crisp and sparkling as a draught of golden wine.

"Oh, blessed, blessed Moor!" exclaimed Jean. "How I love it! You know, half the people in the world
haven't the least idea what Dartmoor
is like. I was enthusiastic to a woman about it only the other day and she actually said, 'Oh, yes—Dartmoor!'
It's quite flat, I suppose, isn't it?"

"Flat!"—with sweeping disgust.

Burke, his hand on the wheel of the big car which was eating up the
miles with the facility of a box-car,
stirring swallowing rabbits, smiled at
the indignant little snarl with which the speech was concluded.

"You don't like deep levels, then?"
he suggested.

She shook her head.

"No, I like hills—something to look up to—to climb."

"Spiritual as well as temporal?"
She was silent a moment.

"Why, yes, I think I do."

He smiled sardonically.

"It's just that terrible angelic tendency of yours I complain of. It's too much for any mere material man
to live up to. I wish you'd step down to my low level occasionally. You don't seem to be afflicted with human passions like the rest of us"—he added, a note of irritation in his voice.

"Indeed I am!"

Burke turned and looked at her
with a curious speculation in his gaze.

"I wonder if that's true?" he said consideringly. "If so, they're still asleep. I'd give anything to be one to come to them."

There was the familiar, half-turban-
like quality in his voice—the sound
as of something held in leash. Jean sensed the danger in the atmosphere.

"You'll rouse one of them — the quite ordinary, commonplace ones of bad temper. If you talk like that,"
she replied prosaically. "You've got to play flat, Geoffrey—keep the spirit of the law as well as the letter."

"All's fair in love and war—as I told you before," he retorted.

"Geoffrey!"—indignantly.

"Jean!"—mimicking her. "Well, we won't quarrel about it now. Here we are at our journey's end. Behold the carriage drive!"

The car swung round a sharp bend
and then bumped its way up a roughly-made track which served to link a species of cobbled yard, constructed at one side of the bungalow,

to the road along which they came.
There stood the bungalow itself.
As the scene unfolded, Jean became conscious of a strange sense of familiarity. An inexplicable impression of having seen the bungalow on some previous occasion, of familiarity with every detail of it—even to a recognition of its peculiar atmosphere of loneliness—looked possession of her.
Only she knew that it was associated in her mind with something disagreeable. Even now, as at Burke's dictation, she waited in the car, while he entered the bungalow from the back,
passing through in order to admit his guest by way of the front door, which had been secured upon the inside, as
was aware of a feeling of intense resistance.

And then, in a flash, recollection returned to her. This was the house of her dream—the of the nightmare vision which had obsessed her during the hours of darkness following her first meeting with Geoffrey Burke.

There stood the solitary dwelling,
seemingly a wild and desolate country,
and to one side of it grew three wretched-looking, scrubby little fir
trees, all of them bent in the same direction by the keen winds as they came sweeping across the Moor from the wide Atlantic. Three Fir Bungalows!
Why, then, the very name itself might have prepared her!

Her eyes fixed themselves on the green-painted door. She knew quite well what must happen next. The door would open and reveal Burke standing on the threshold. She watched it with fascinated eyes.

Presently came the sound of steps,
then the grating noise of a key turning stiffly in the lock. The door was flung open and Burke strode across the threshold and came to the side of the car to help her out. Jean waited, half terrified, for his first words.

"Welcome to the bungalow, Miss Holt," he said, with a smile that was dream? She felt that if he chanced to say jokingly, "Will you come into my parlour?" she should scream.

"Go straight in, will you?" said Burke. "I'll just run the car round to the garage and then we might as well get ready before the others come. I'm starving, aren't you?"

The spell was broken. The everyday commonplace words brought with them a rush of overpowering relief,
sweeping away the dreamlike sense
of unreality and terror, and as Jean nodded and responded gaily, "Abo-solutely famished," she could have laughed aloud at the ridiculous fears
which had assailed her.

Jean, having delightfully explored
the front portion of the bungalow, joined Burke in the kitchen, guided thither by the clinking of crockery
and the cheerful crackle of a hearth
fire, and then, as she turned to the scientific application of a pair of bottles.

"I had no idea you were such a domesticated individual," she remarked, as she watched him carefully
warming the brown earthenware tea-
pots over the fire, and then, as she saw him busy herself making hot buttered toast.

"Oh, Judy and I are independent up here, I assure you," he answered with pardonable pride. "We never bring any of the servants from Willow Ferry, but cook for ourselves. A woman may as well accompany you to the chores—clean the place, and wash up
the dishes from the day before, and so on. But beyond that we are self-sufficing."

"Where does your woman come from? I didn't see a house for miles round."

"No, you can't see the place, but there's a little farmstead tucked away in a hollow about three miles from here, which provides us with cream and butter and eggs—and with our char-lady."

Jean surveyed with satisfaction a rapidly mounting pile of delicately brownied toast, creaming with golden butter.

"There, that's ready," she announced at last. "I do hope Judy and Co.
will arrive soon. Hot buttered toast spots with keeping. It gets all sadder
and tastes like underdone sho leather.
Do you think you'll long?"

Burke threw a glance at the grandfather's clock ticking solemnly away
in a corner of the kitchen.

"It's half-past four," he said dou-tfully. "I don't think we'll risk that luscious-looking toast of yours by waiting for them. I'm going to brew
the tea, the kettle's boiling."

"Won't Judith think it horrid of us
not to wait?"

"Oh, Lord no! Judy and I never stand on any ceremony with each other. Any old thing might happen to delay them a bit!"

Jean, frankly hungry after her spin
in the car through the invigorating moorland air, yielded without further protest, and tea resolved itself into a jolly little "tete-a-tete" affair, par-
taken of in the shelter of the verandah, with the glorious vista of the Moor spread out before her delighted eyes.

Burke was in one of those rare
moods of his which were likely to inspire her with a genuine liking for him—when the unruly, turbulent devil within him, so hardly held in check, was temporarily replaced by a certain amiable boyishness of a distinctly endearing quality—that "little boy" quality which, in a grown man, always appeals so irresistibly to any woman.

The time slipped away quickly, and it was with a shock of astonishment
that Jean realized, on glancing down
at the watch on her wrist, that over an hour and a half had gone by while they had been sitting chatting on the verandah.

"Geoffrey! Do you know it's exactly six o'clock! I'm certain something must have happened. Judy and the Holtfores would surely be here by now
if they hadn't had an accident of some sort."

Burke looked at his watch.

"Yes," he acquiesced slowly. "It is
—get it back."

A look of concern spread itself over Jean's face.

"I think we ought to get the car
out again and go and see if anything
has happened," she said decisively.
"They may have had a spill. Were they coming by motor?"

"No, Judy drove down to Newton
Abbey in the dog-cart, and the Holtfores proposed hiring some sort of conveyance from a livery stable."

"Well, I expect they've had a smash of some kind. I'm sure we ought to go and find out! Was Judy driving that excitable chestnut of yours?"

He shook his head.

"No—a mild, well-conducted pony, as meek as Moses. We'll give them a quarter of an hour more. If they don't show up by then, I'll run
the car out and we'll investigate."

The minutes crawled by on leaden feet. Jean felt restless and uneasy more than a trifle astonished that Burke should manifest so little anxiety concerning his sister's whereabouts. Then, just before the quarter of an hour was up, there came the shrill tink of a bicycle bell, and
a boy cycled up to the gate and,
springing off his machine, advanced
up the cobbled path with a telegram
in his hand.

Jean's face blanched, and she waited in taut suspense while Burke
rippled across the ominous orange-coloured envelope.

"What is it?" she asked nervously.

"Have they—is it bad news?"

There was a pause before Burke answered. Then he handed the flimsy sheet to her, remarking shortly:

"They're not coming."

Jean's eyes flew along the brief
message.

"Returning tomorrow. Am staying
the night with Holtfores. Judy."

"I am disappointed!" she declared.

"I just hate the sight of a telegraph boy! They always spoil things. I rather wonder you get your telegrams
delivered at this outlandish spot," she added musingly.

"Oh, of course we have to pay mileage. There's no free delivery to the back of beyond!"

As he spoke, Burke vanished into the semi-dark of the garage, and presently Jean heard sounds suggestive of ineffectual attempts to start the engine accompanied by a series of curses or two. A few minutes later Burke reappeared, looking rather hot
and dusty and with a black smear
of oil across his cheek.

"You'd better go back to the bungalow," he said gruffly. "There's something gone wrong with the works, and it will take me a few minutes to put matters right."

Jean nodded sympathetically and retreated towards the house, leaving
him to tinker with the car's internals.
It was growing chilly—the "cool of the evening" manifests itself early up on Dartmoor—and she was not at all sorry to find herself indoors. The wind
had dropped, but a curious, still sort of coldness seemed to be permeating
the atmosphere, faintly moist, and as Jean stood at the window, gazing
out half absently, she suddenly noticed a delicate blur of mist veiling
the low-lying ground towards the right of the bungalow. Her eyes hurriedly swept the wide expanse in front of her. The valleys between the moor-tops were hardly visible. They had become mere basins cupping wan
lakes of writhable vapour which, even
as she watched them crept
higher, inch by inch, as though responding to some impulse of a rising tide.

Jean had lived long enough in Devonshire by this time to know the rules of being caught in a mist on Dartmoor, and she sped out of the door, intending to go to the garage
and warn Burke that he must hurry.
He met her on the threshold of the bungalow, and she turned back with him into the room she had just quitted.

"Are you ready?" she asked eagerly.
"There's a regular moor mist coming on. The sooner we start the better."

He looked at her oddly. He was rather pale and his eyes were curiously bright.

"The car won't budge," he said.
"I've been tinkering at her all this time to no purpose."

"Won't budge?" she repeated. "But you must make it budge, Geoffrey.
We can't—we can't stay here! What's gone wrong with it?"

Burke launched out into a string of technicalities which left Jean with a confused feeling that the mechanism of a motor-car must be an invention of the devil designed expressly for the chastening of human nature, but from which she succeeded in gathering the bare skeleton fact that something had gone radically wrong with the car's running powers.

Her apprehensions quickened.

"Make the best of a bad job—and console each other," he suggested lightly.

She frowned a little. It did not seem to her quite the moment for jesting.

"Don't be ridiculous, Geoffrey," she said sharply. "We've got to get back home. What can you do?"

"I can't do anything more than I've done. Here we are and here we've got to stay."

"You know that's impossible," she said, in a quick, low voice.

He looked at her with a sudden
devil-may-care glint in his eyes.

"You never can tell before hand
whether things are impossible or not.
I know I used to think that heaven
on earth was impossible," he said
slowly. "I'm not so sure now."

He drew a step nearer her. "Would you mind so dreadfully if we had to stay here, little Miss Prunes-and-Prisms?"

Jean stared at him in amazement.
In amazement which slowly turned to incredulous horror as a sudden almost unbelievable idea flashed into her mind, kindled into being by the leaping, half-uttered note in his tones.

"Geoffrey!" Her lips moved
stiffly, and, even to herself, her voice
sounded strange in the silence.

"I don't believe there is anything wrong with the car at all. . . . Or if there is, you've tampered with it on purpose. . . . You're not being straight with me!"

She broke off, her startled gaze
searching his face as though she would wring the truth from him. He told her that day I drove you back from Dartmoor—"A woman's happiness depends upon her reputation."

She looked at him quickly, recalling the scattered details of that afternoon
—Burke's gibes at what he believed to be her fear of gossiping tongues
and her own answer to his taunts:
"No woman can afford to ignore scandal." And then, following upon his sudden, curious absorption in his own thoughts.

The remembrance of it all was like
a torchlight flashed into a dark place,
illuminating what had been hidden
and inscrutable. She spoke swiftly.

"And it was then—that afternoon
—you thought of this?"

He bent his head.

"Yes," he acknowledged.

Jean was silent. It was all clear
now—penetratingly so.

"And the Holtfores? Are there any such people?" she asked directly.

She scarcely knew what prompted
her to put so purposeless and unimportant a question. Actually, she felt no interest at all in the answer. It could not make the least difference
to her present circumstances.

Perhaps it was a little the feeling that this trumpery process of question and answer served to postpone the inevitable moment when she must face the situation in which she found herself—face it in its simple crude-ness, denuded of unessential wish and wherefores.

"Oh, yes, the Holtfores are quite real," answered Burke. "And so is the plan for an expedition to one of the tors by moonlight. Only it will be carried out tomorrow night instead of tonight. Tonight is for the settlement between you and me."

The strained expression of utter shocked incredulity was gradually leaving Jean's face. The unreal was becoming real, and she knew now
what she was up against; the hard,
reckless quality of Burke's voice left her no doubt.

"Geoffrey," she said quietly. "you won't really do this thing?"

If she had hoped to move him by a look, she was disappointed.

The note of tenderness was gone now.
He swept away by the resurgence of a ferocious relentlessness—triumphant,
implacable—that meant winning at all costs. "But the world won't know that!"
he repeated. "After tonight, for your own sake—because a woman's reputation cannot stand the breath of scandal, you'll be compelled to marry
me. You'll have no choice."

Jean stood quite still, staring in front of her. Once her lips moved, but no sound came from them. Slowly laboriously almost, she was realizing exactly what had happened, her mind
adjusting itself to the recognition of the trap in which she had been caught.

Her dream had come true, after all
—horribly inconceivably true.

The heavy silence which had fallen seemed suddenly filled with the string-Burke's voice—mocking and exultant.

"You'll be stamped with the mark of the beast for ever. It's too late to try and run away. . . .
It's too late."

CHAPTER XXVII.

Into the Mist

"Then that telegram—that telegram from Judy—I suppose that was all part of the plan?"

Jean felt the futility of the question even while she asked it. The answer was so inevitable.

"Yes," he replied. "I knew that Judy meant staying the night with her friends before she went away. She sent the wire—because I asked her to."

"Judy did that?"

There was such an immeasurable
depth of reproach in the low, quick-spoken whisper that Burke felt glad Judy was not there to hear it. Had it been otherwise, she might have regretted the share she had taken in the proceedings, small as it had been.
She was not a man, half-crazed by love, in whose passion-blinded vision
nothing counted save the winning of the one woman, nor had she known Burke's plan in its entirety.

"Judy sent the wire," he said.
"But give her so much credit, she didn't know that I intended—this. She only knew that I wanted another chance of seeing you alone—of asking you to be my wife, and I told her that."

"I don't know that I intended—this. She

"YEARS CAN BRING YOU ADDED CHARM!"

SAYS JACK HOLT

JACK HOLT
Columbia Star

"Some women seem
to grow more allur-
ing every year,"
says Jack Holt.
"Birds only
add to their charm!"

"Here in Hollywood you see them
every day—ac-
tresses still every bit as youthful as
they were years ago,
more poised,
more irresistible than ever. Still the ideal of an adoring
public!"

"No matter what
her age, a woman
who has the fresh
glowing charm of youth is always attractive."

"I should think
that every woman
would learn the complexion secret
the screen and stage stars know!"

You will want to know how the lovely stars keep youthful charm
right through the years! Guard complexion beauty as
we do, "with Lux
Toilet Soap!"

Important fact—actresses the world
over—in Hollywood (686 of the stars here!)—on Broadway—in Europe—depend on this fragrant,
analysis white soap for every type of skin. The carers of dollar-a-face French soap for 10c.

simple, straightforward appeal to the best that might be in him, she failed completely. For the moment, all that was good in him, anything chivalrous
which the helplessness her womanhood might have invoked, was in abeyance. He was mere primitive man, who had succeeded in carrying off the woman he meant to mate and was prepared to hold her at all costs.

"I told you I would compel you,"
he said doggedly. "That I would let nothing in the world stand between you and me. And I meant every word
I said. You've no way out now—except marriage with me!"

The imperious decision of his tone
roused her fighting spirit.

"Do you imagine," she broke out scornfully, "that after this—I would ever marry you? . . . I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man
on earth! I die sooner!"

"I dare say you would," he returned composedly. "I have no right to be afraid of death. Only you see, that doesn't happen to be the alternative.
The alternative is a smirched reputation. Tarnished a little—after tonight
—even if you marry me; dragged utterly into the mire if you refuse. I'm putting it before you with brutal frankness. I know. But I want you to realize just what it means and to promise that you'll be my wife before
it's too late—while I can still get you back to Staple during the hours of propriety"—smiling grimly.

She looked at him with a slow,
measured glance of bitter contempt.

"But I don't want to be married. It is preferable to marriage with you—
more endurable," she added, with the sudden tormented impulse of a trapped prey to hurt back.

"You don't really believe that!"

About twenty girls attended the surprise "kitchen" shower given by the Misses Gladys and Mildred Higginbotham for Miss Grace Patterson on Monday evening, July 25. Cards were enjoyed, the honors going to Margaret Allan and Belle Flynn. After a dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Higginbotham and Mrs. Evans, a large basket effectively decorated was brought in and contained many useful gifts for the bride-to-be.

The Vancouver Sun in a recent issue contained a photograph of Lloyd A. Manley, proprietor of the Angelus hotel, Vancouver, who in the early days of Coleman owned the Grand Union hotel. He has been prominent in organizing the B. C. Hotels Association, and for the fifth time has been appointed president. He organized the Alberta association, and for the first two years of its life was president.

A short time ago one of the Orange lodges in Toronto received a cheque for five dollars from Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National, as a contribution to a certain memorial fund. On close scrutiny, however, the fact was revealed that the donation was a grant from public funds, rather than a personal contribution. This being the case, the lodge returned the cheque, refusing to take money from the federal government in these trying times. In other words, they did not approve of Sir Henry making a good fellow of himself with a measly five dollar donation at the expense of the government, when he himself is drawing down $75,000 a year and several perquisites besides—Cranbrook Courier.

every morning for a sign of the clouds which will bring rain, and walk to the barn with a feeling that the fight must be faced for another day. In the meantime that grass hoppers are ravaging his crops, living on what moisture the short grain stalks may afford, while the farmer ponders how he may overcome them.

But next year may be better! That is the expression frequently heard as you travel among the farmers. Such is the indomitable spirit of the Saskatchewan farmer, who pins his faith on history repeating itself, in which perseverance, industry and integrity will triumph over all odds.

Hate off to the men who will stay with the game, refusing to be beaten, for they are the salt of the earth. "Peace hath her victories, no less than war," well might be quoted in reviewing the fight which Saskatchewan farmers are waging.
